All Hallows' Read—a terrific tradition for tots, tweens, and teens—presented by . . .

Purchase: All Hallows' Read book coupons (sold in sheets of 10 for $2.50) October 1–31 at the Check Out Desk; in the FriendSpace on October 14; and during BatFest Stories at the Library the morning of October 28.

Give: A coupon (with or without another treat) to the sweet or spooky visitors ringing your doorbell on Halloween night!

Children and Teens: Redeem a coupon for a free children's book, YA book, or paperback from either (1) a Friends' Saturday sale in the FriendSpace, or (2) the Friends Book Corner on the upper level on any day of the week. Take your coupon and book selection to the Library Check Out Desk.

All Hallows' Read is a tradition started by author Neil Gaiman. Gaiman would really like people to give scary books for All Hallows' Read, but he supports all efforts to get all kinds of books into the hands and heads of young readers.
